Memories of one-room schoolhouses flooded the minds of grandparents as they visited their grandchildren at Magnolia School last week.

As they watched their young progeny learn in brightly decorated classrooms with friendly teachers in a relaxed atmosphere, they couldn't help recalling their own own early education.

"That was the one thing I noticed the most," said Frances Bean, whose grandson Christopher Bean is in the fourth grade. "When they changed from one classroom they made a little more noise. We tippy-toed."

"There's more freedom in the school and the teachers take their time with the children. (They're) very patient," said Virginia Liptak of Rowland Heights, who was sitting with her grandson Jason Liptak in a kindergarten classroom.

Alberta Sommer, who traveled from San Gabriel with her husband to see their kindergartener grandson Alec Barron, remembered her strict elementary education in the Midwest with all eight grades crammed into a one-room schoolhouse. She said she preferred the friendly atmosphere of today's schools.

"Grandparents Day" was part of Magnolia School's Open House Week, Principal Roberta Hennigan said. She said the school initiated the day last year and it was such a success that it has become an annual event.

Because so many children have grandparents who live out of town, the day has been expanded to include other "special people" in the children's lives, like aunts, uncles — even babysitters. About 120 grandparents and special people came to Magnolia school last week.

"It's giving them the opportunity to see how school has changed so much," Hennigan said. "It gives them a chance to see where their child spends a significant amount of time."

Upland resident Rose Scorsatto, who visited her granddaughter Ashley Scorsatto along with her husband Primo, was attending her second Grandparents Day.

"It gives us an opportunity to be near our grandchildren," she said. "That way we understand what they're doing every day."

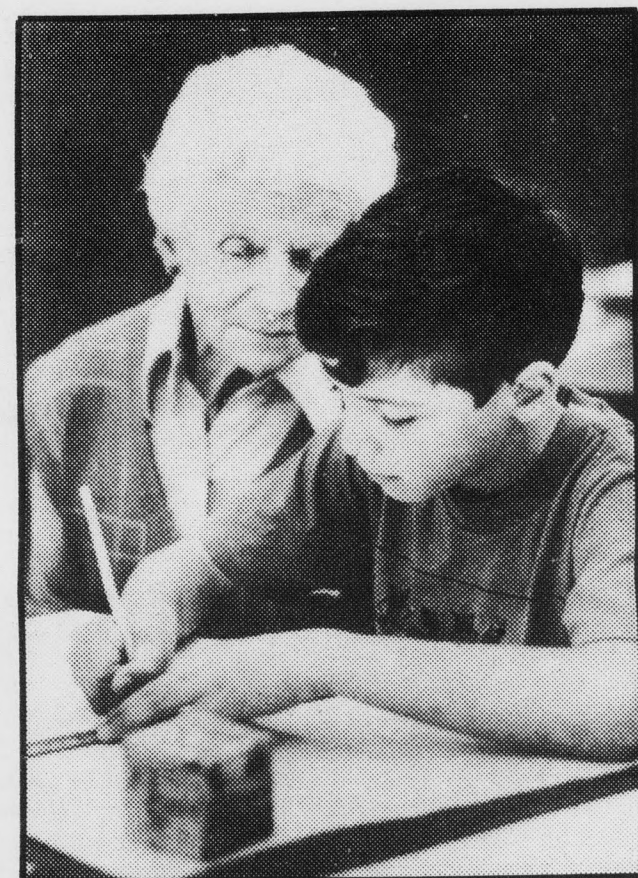

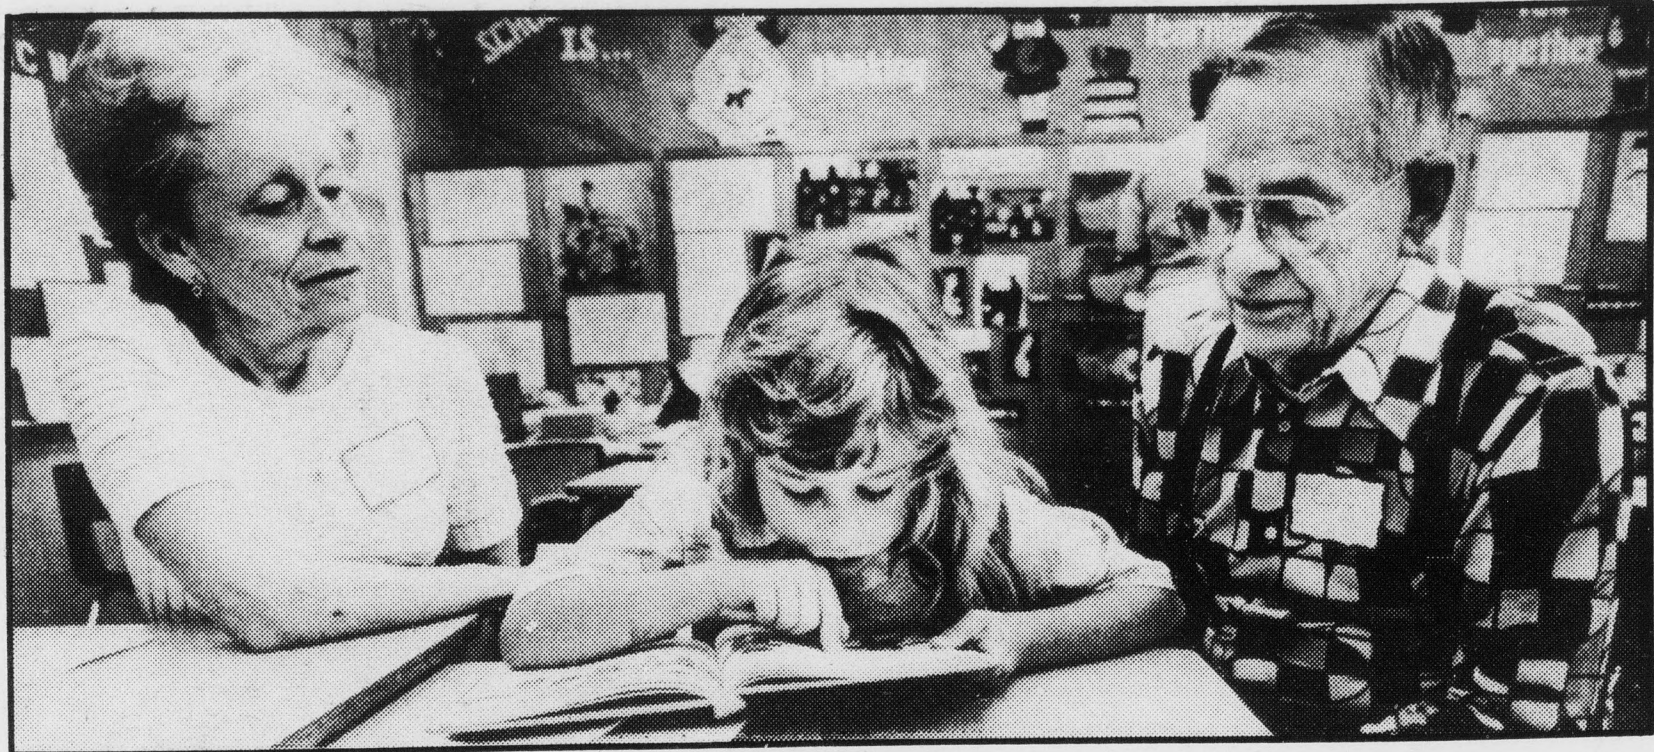

As well as visiting the classrooms, the older folks were entertained by groups of Magnolia students who read poems they had authored about grandparents.

As grandmothers are wont to do, Bean and fellow grandmother Peg Osborne stood in the parking lot afterwards talking about their grandchildren.

Bean, who has been a room mother at Magnolia and still gets volunteered by her grandson to mend parachutes and make bean bags for his class, said she is on-call 24 hours a day for her grandchildren.

Osborne, an Ontario resident who was visiting fourth grade grandson Kurt Beutel, is also a working grandmother. She takes care of the brood three days a week after school, she said.

"And I love every minute of it," she said. "I feel so sorry for grandparents that are far away. What they're missing...."

Country music buffs seeking more recruits

By Suzanne Sproul

The Inland Empire chapter of the California Country Music Association is busy establishing its roots in the West Valley and seeking members.

"We want to promote country music and get the community involved in all of our activities," said Jim Bonner, chapter president.

Bonner, of the singing Bonner Family in Rancho Cucamonga, said the group wants to attract country performers, country music lovers and music lovers in general.

"We really want to get families involved with the association. We also want to form a youth branch of the group. The future of everything is with our youth and we want to get them involved," Bonner said. "After all, country music is a family affair."

Membership fees are $15 for non-entertainers, $12 for performers and $6 for youth. For more information about the organization or memberships, call 989-5280 or 987-0289.

Diane Battersby, association board member and publicity chairwoman, said the local chapter will be the only one of its kind in the state to have a specific branch set aside for young people.

"The association already has been involved in a lot of charity work. We want to help wherever and whenever we can. Members have been very active with raising money to support Empty Arms, a newsletter designed to help find missing children," Battersby said.

Another aspect of the industry the group is delving into is marketing, she said.

West Valley country music entertainers looking for jobs or advancement can send the association resumes and pictures. The association will act as a liaison for the performers and those who are looking for acts.

In addition, the association has its own recording studio, Innovative Studios in Riverside.

"We want to plan events at least once a month such as an all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner; a battle of the bands; dance contests; clogging contests and Bluegrass concerts," Bonner said.

The group also wants to combine concert or activity dates with rodeos, Battersby said.

"The country music association isn't just for entertainers. We plan to schedule good family entertainment. We're strictly family oriented," she said.

Bonner said he welcomes any ideas about planning events or improving the organization.

"You don't even have to be a country music fan to join, just be interested in getting involved in the community. I'm an entertainer but I love all kinds of music. The one thing about music is it has no barriers. It's universal," he said.

Volunteer instructors for singing, dancing or horseback riding also are needed.

Notre Dame students take spring break in R.C.

Eleven of the visiting 13 Notre Dame seniors celebrate spring break by wearing their specialized "Rancho Cucamonga T-shirts."

Bridgett McCarsen and 12 of her college friends decided to shuck the tradition of heading to Fort Lauderdale for spring break.

Instead, McCarsen enthusiastically invited the Notre Dame seniors to her Rancho Cucamonga home without mentioning the houseguests to her parents. But Sam and Pat McCarsen apparently didn't mind and the entire South Bend contingent converged on their home for Easter.

So the group traveled across country from Indiana for a two-week visit to Southern California.

"We had to have an on-going buffet 24-hours-per-day, but that worked out OK. That many people can really eat a lot," said Pat McC Carson.

"We told them they were welcome to a spot on our floor and they slept in sleeping bags. But the one problem was showers. There were about 15 showers a day."

Friends of the McC Carsons volunteered their time and cars to take the group to such Southern California attractions as Hollywood, Disneyland and Newport Beach. The collegians also traveled to Tijuana and Las Vegas.

"When they left from O'Hare Airport in Chicago it was snowing and when they arrived here the temperature was in the 80s," Pat McC Carson said.

Four of the visiting students had never been to California, she said.

The McC Carsons hired a professional bunny to deliver specially monogrammed sweatshirts to the students, commemorating their visit. The Rancho Cucamonga family and the students then celebrated Easter with a barbecue for 75 Southern California Notre Dame alumni.

master plan to revamp the community college system.

The report by the Commission for the Review of the Master Plan recommended $50 million be spent statewide on mandatory student assessment programs, counseling, and placement, something that Chaffey College already has in place, said counselor Liz Stark.

"It's nice that we have taken some initiative to get things going before anybody said we have to," Stark said.

When Chaffey College's assessment program is in place this May, all new students enrolling for the summer term and thereafter will be tested on their reading and math skills.

"Now we have to go by what students say (about their skill level) and they don't always know," Stark said. "We'll have a test and test results, and we'll be able to make more precise recommendations."

Chaffey College has been working on a mandatory assessment program for the past three years, Stark said.

"This whole issue of assessment, counseling and placement is a concept already widely accepted by counselors

Ontario thrift center closes

The Society of St. Vincent De Paul's Ontario thrift center at 622 E. Holt Blvd., Ontario, founded four years ago by society volunteers, is closing its doors because it has lost its lease.

Managed since its opening by Vincent Buonassassi and Judith Grimes, the center has helped the poor of the West Valley. It has distributed more than $400,000 in food, clothing and furniture to the needy.

The Society of St. Vincent De Paul will continue to be represented in the West Valley by volunteer conferences in Chino, Montclair, Ontario, Upland, Claremont and Pomona. Donations of reusable articles can be referred to St. Margaret Mary parish in Chino and St. Joseph parish in Upland. For more information, call 988-4111.

Skip bail? Holmes out to find you

By Andrew Horan

"I never liked the words 'bounty hunter,'" Russ Holmes said, sitting back in his leather chair.

"It doesn't sound professional, and I'm a professional."

Holmes, 44, prefers to be called a "bail bond investigator," but he's a hunter all the same.

The retired Los Angeles County sheriff tracks people "who for many, many reasons decide not to show up in court" after being released from jail on bail, he said.

"Either the guy knows he's guilty and going to prison or jail," he continued, "or he knows he's going to be fined and can't afford it, or someone has scared him into thinking he's going to be ravaged by all those savages in prison."

"We've chased everything," the Rancho Cucamonga resident said, "from drunk drivers, burglars, robbers and child molesters to drug dealers and strung-out drug users," he said.

On the job, Holmes wears a .45-caliber pistol and carries "an arsenal you wouldn't believe" in his car, yet he doesn't lead a shoot-'em-up life.

"I really don't consider there is a lot of risk" in the occupation, he said. "If you know what you're doing, the element of surprise is on your side."

"When you're in a business like this, bail bond investigator Russ Holmes says, apprehending a bail jumper 'looks like kidnapping' to the general public. But those he brings to justice 'aren't surprised we're there,'" he says.

Bail bond investigators can usually be found "on the phones, in the courts, out doing surveillances," Holmes said.

Holmes spends much of his time in a comfortably cramped home office. Mirrors hang on two walls, and two telephones crowd the desk.

And there is the requisite computer on the credenza.

"It's just an electronic filing system," he said with bravado.

"It prints possible addresses, hangouts, phone numbers" of those he's out to find.

"Ninety percent of the time, when it's all done, we have one place to go, and, voila, there he is," Holmes said, a smile passing over his long face.

That smile betrays the pleasure Holmes finds in his work.

"To me, it's fun when you See HUNTER/Page 28 and community colleges generally," she said.

Stark also applauded the commission's recommendations on remedial education and support for capital outlays for assessment.

"To do an effective, thorough job, we need more funds."

Stark had one criticism of the report.

"One thing this report doesn't say is what does this assessment include?"

Canestro edges out McGilloway by 16 votes

By Kimberly Heinrichs

In a surprisingly close race, former Councilman Albert Canestro edged out businessman Thomas McGilloway last week by 16 votes to take one of three open Upland council seats.

Incumbent Frank Carpenter and Planning Commissioner Rosalie Kamansky also were elected to the council. Carpenter received 2,194 votes and Kamansky drew 1,827.

McGilloway, a management consultant who has lived in Upland only seven months, went from an unknown to a candidate who drew 1,811 votes, just behind Canestro's 1,827. Another newcomer, Wanda Parker Kloeppel, received 983 votes.

The three faces familiar to Upland voters were triumphant in the end, but newcomer McGilloway made a strong stand. The youngest candidate at age 39, he said he represented the "baby boomers" in the city and hoped to get them involved in their city.

"Naturally, it's a disappointment when you don't achieve a goal, but I'm not going to use the word lose,"

McGilloway said, noting that the experience of meeting the public and getting involved was a positive one.

He added that he has not been discouraged and could return to politics at a later date.

"I'm not going to be a stranger around City Hall," he promised.

Canestro was relieved and excited that he had emerged victorious from the close race.

He described himself as "confident" until after the first four or five precincts were in, and he dropped to fourth place. However, he regained a narrow lead shortly after and kept it the rest of the evening.

"I knew we had a battle on our hands, but we hoped for the best and we even prayed a bit," said Canestro, who was attending a party with 80 supporters at his campaign manager's home election night. He described the atmosphere at the house as "bedlam," like a football game, as the tallies came in.

"We were hootin' and hollerin'," he said.

While pleased at her own election, Kamansky expressed disappointment at the low voter turnout. Some 13.9 percent of the registered voters went to the polls last week, the lowest percentage in Upland since at least 1968, according to figures supplied by the city clerk's office.

"It's a shame that more people don't exercise that right," Kamansky said, adding that she is looking forward to working with the council members as a team during the next four years.

Carpenter, who was holding his own party at home, described himself as being "on a pink cloud."

"I'm very grateful and appreciative of the voters for returning me to office," said the recently retired salesman who says he'll now devote more time to council matters.

Political venture was rewarding for youth

Candidates weren't the only ones pacing nervously on election night last week.

Upland High School senior Steve Snyder was pacing right along with them.

The 18-year-old was Upland council candidate Thomas McGilloway's student campaign manager, whose responsibility was to oversee 30 other young campaigners.

"I'm quite nervous," he admitted as the final precincts came in, showing his candidate only slightly behind the third-place competitor in the three-seat election.

"I'm going to yell if it's by one vote," the young man promised.

But he didn't have to. Still, his candidate lost by only 16 votes.

Snyder got involved in the campaign after he heard the five candidates vying for the three council seats at a forum for the high school. In a mock election by the students, McGilloway was one of three winners.

He liked what McGilloway had to say, and when the businessman expressed interest in student support, Snyder signed up.

As a first-time voter, as well as a first-time campaigner, Snyder said he was far from discouraged with the electoral process, despite his candidate's loss. In fact, he said he plans to be back on the campaign trail in two years for the next council election.

Air controllers seek FAA cooperation

By Ian Fallis

People who stepped into air traffic controller jobs when the controllers went out on strike in 1981 now are the object of a union organization effort.

"Most were hired as a result of the PATCO (Professional Air Traffic Controllers) strike," acknowledged Karl Grundmann, a controller at Los Angeles radar control station.

Grundmann is the controllers' representative to the National Air Traffic Controllers Association (NATCA) for California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii.

But NATCA is not another PATCO, said Kelly Candaele, the association's regional coordinator. "We're not a militant organization. We have no intention of repeating what happened to PATCO," Candaele said.

Candaele, in Ontario to talk to controllers at the Ontario International Airport tower and at the radar-control station there, said NATCA wants to be "cooperative, not adversarial," with the Federal Aviation Administration.

"We're concerned with the safety of the air traffic system, just as management is,"

Grundmann said.

One goal NATCA and the FAA have in common is a desire to increase the number of controllers.

"We have announced plans to hire another 1,000 controllers," said Fred Farrar, an FAA spokesman in Washington.

Grundmann said the skies are safe, but only because of hard work. "The only reason it is not unsafe is that the controllers who are working now are working long hours, working very hard and are very dedicated," he said.

Part of the reason is the increase in the number of flights all over the country as airlines have sprung up since deregulation. Grundmann doesn't expect the increase to slow.

"The major airlines are adding See CONTROLLERS/Page 9 flights every minute of every day, and new airlines are popping up every minute of every day," he said.

Steve Henderson, a controller at the Ontario radar control station, said the problems have "affected Ontario first-hand."

Airport traffic has been increasing monthly for the last four years, and is expected to increase dramatically when the airport's new terminal opens in 1988.

"Staffing is fine ... unless someone is on vacation or is out sick," Henderson said. "It's at the point that if we lose one or two people from a shift it's noticeable, and the burden per controller goes up dramatically."

In addition, the equipment — particularly that at the Ontario tower — is aging, he said. Replacing outdated equipment is another goal NATCA and the FAA share.

"We have a $10 billion program to modify the air traffic control system," Farrar said.

Currently, "It's all being held together with Band-Aids and through patchwork," Henderson said.

Grundmann isn't worried that new equipment will displace jobs. "Attrition will take care of that," he said.

NATCA is also with the FAA in seeking to keep cuts due to the Gramm-Rudman federal deficit reduction act from affecting the controllers.

"Basically those are goals of the FAA too," Farrar said. "... We're doing the best we can to not have Gramm-Rudman (reduce the workforce)," Farrar said.

One area of difference is that NATCA also wants to prevent the FAA from contracting out some training programs.

Farrar said that is currently under study, mostly as a way to get the most air traffic control out of the limited number of controllers.

But Grundmann said those positions are usually filled by controllers who need a break from tension the job creates, and charged that the people who would take those positions wouldn't be up-to-date on air traffic control.

Civic center will save rental money for R.C.

By Marianne Aiken

The basic schematic design for the new Rancho Cucamonga Civic Center was approved last Monday night, paving the way for the city to start saving money on rent.

City offices are now spread out over nine separate facilities along Base Line Road, and the city pays about $250,000 a year to rent space, said Rancho Cucamonga City Manager Lauren Wasserman.

But by the end of the year, ground will be broken on a new civic center complex on Haven Avenue near Foothill Boulevard, featuring a sheriff's station, a spacious service lobby for people who do business with the city, and even a shower for officials who want to wash up before their next meeting.

"That's the focus of this area," Wasserman said, pointing to a drawing of the first-floor, double-height service lobby, "for someone to be able to get all their permits without having to go far."

The City Council, with Mayor Jeff King absent, unanimously approved the schematic design of architect John Carl Warnecke and Associates and gave project designer Charles "Duke" Oakley the go-ahead to proceed into the design phase.

During the next 6-8 weeks, Wasserman said, interior layout refinement, cost estimates, and landscape details will be worked out, and work will begin on acoustical, structural, and mechanical engineering.

"We went through a number of steps to get the general form and texture of the building," Oakley said, describing the brick and glass building that will be located just south of the new Foothill Law and Justice Center. Oakley explained that five department counters will be clustered in the service lobby, with reception areas exposed out messy office desks hidden from public view.

"The reality of the workplace doesn't intrude on that," Oakley said. Another privacy feature of the new building is a staircase leading to the backstage area of the council chambers. "There's no crossing of public and private space as there had been before,"

Oakley said.

Plans for underground public parking at the facility ran aground because of a $4.8 million price tag.

A four-member civic center design subcommittee talked about locating a library and museum on top of the underground parking, but those plans were killed because of the cost of the underground parking scheme.

"That's what put it out of reach," said Councilman Chuck Buquet, who is a member of the subcommittee.

Full size drawings can be very helpful when laying out a project. Use the shop floor for drawing chalk layouts or make a blackboard with a sheet of tempered hardboard painted flat black. This is light in weight and can be screwed to any available wall space.

When working with hardwood, its often a good idea to use hardened screws such as sheetrock or sheet metal screws. Hardened screws don't tend to break as easily as bright metal wood screws. Phillips head screws are also better to use, it is less likely that the screwdriver will slip and damage the work.

Make it a practice to clean oilstones on a regular basis. Use lacquer thinner and wipe off dirt and gummed oil with a rag. Heating the stone in an oven or soaking it in kerosene will remove embedded dirt and oil from a badly clogged stone. Be sure to put your used rags in a metal covered container-they are flammable.

SCAQMD hits 24 local businesses with violations

By Philip Boas

The South Coast Air Quality Management District released the names of 24 West Valley businesses that were fined for violating air quality regulations during the final quarter of 1985.

Of those businesses named, none were guilty of serious violations, said Ron Ketcham, SCAQMD news bureau chief.

Though West Valley businesses were slapped with $10,325 in fines, the amount is "not unusually high" for the region, said Ketcham. "It's nothing to be alarmed about. It's fairly typical."

According to an SCAQMD report, the two most heavily fined businesses were Lundeen Coating Corp. of Fontana, which paid $1,000 for "excessive emissions," and Western Metal Decorating Co. of Rancho Cucamonga which paid $1,000 for maintaining "excessive volatile organic compounds."

Other West Valley Violators include:

- General Latex and Chemical Corp., of Cucamonga, $500.
- Dupracote Inc., of Cucamonga, $500.
- Exxon Dealer of Fontana, $200.
- Lundeen Coating Corp., of Fontana, $900.
- S&R Oil Co., of Fontana, $200.
- Angelus Block Co., Inc., of Fontana, $600.
- Pacific Corrugated Pipe Co., of Fontana, $400.
- Tecon Pacific, of Fontana, $800.
- Mobil Dealer of Montclair, $100.
- Green's Industrial Painting, of Ontario, $500.
- Patio Industries, of Ontario, $500.
- Mobil Dealer of Ontario, $150.

- Prestige Station Inc., of Ontario, $100.
- Con-Air Construction Inc., of Ontario, $500.
- Texaco Inc., of Ontario, $200.
- Thrifty Oil Co., of Ontario, $100.
- Truckstops Corp. of America, of Ontario, $500.
- Hooker Industries of Ontario, $800.
- Harv's Cleaners Inc., of Rancho Cucamonga, $200.
- Larry Beck Gas Garden, of Rancho Cucamonga, $125.
- Mobil Dealer of Rancho Cucamonga, $250.
- Chevron Dealer of Upland, $200.

Hoping to deter future violations, the SCAQMD has begun publishing the quarterly list of businesses that have paid fines for breaking air quality rules.

"This is the first year we've done this, and we're interested in how it will be received," said Ketcham. "Maybe we'll have some impact on companies."

He said SCAQMD will know the lists are successful if violators become angry that their names have been published. "If we get phone calls of outrage then we'll know we've had an impact."

The SCAQMD was created by an act of the state legislature in 1977 to attain and maintain state and federal air quality standards in the non-desert portions of Los Angeles, Riverside, and San Bernardino counties, and all of Orange County.

Companies within the entire district were fined $326,000 during October through December of 1985, according to AQMD's quarterly list.

The biggest violator was Mountain High-Holiday Hill Corp. in Wrightwood which paid fines of $15,000 for operating six diesel generators without obtaining air permits.

OVERWEIGHT: Are You A Victim?

Simple Tests Will Determine Cause of Overweight

Advanced Medical testing will require the participation of 100 people interested in Losing Weight and improving their Level of Health.

The program consists of a new approach to Weight Loss recently conducted of Doctors University Clinical Research Center.

The studies reveal that 90% of all overweight people crave food and over-eat because of chemical imbalance.

WEIGHT LOSS OF UP TO 4 LBS A WEEK

The Weight Loss program is based entirely on an individual approach beginning with a series of scientific tests to determine the energy levels of each individual participating.

Each of the tests will tell the Doctors something very important about your current physical condition.

PAINLESS TESTING CONSISTS OF

• LIFESCAN

A complete computer scan of your body's organs will show our medical team how efficiently the major organs in your body are functioning.

• ALLERGY TESTS

Testing food & environmental allergies. This includes a personalized meal plan.

• MINERAL ANALYSIS

This is useful in testing for mineral deficiencies & toxic metals

• BODY-FAT COMPOSITION

Body composition is analyzed to determine levels of body fat for weight loss.

• URINALYSIS

• THYROID TEST

• NUTRITION TEST

• PERSONALIZED MEAL PLAN

• STRESS TEST

• HEALTH & RISK EVALUATION

• PULMONARY Lung capacity test

With this knowledge they will know how to correct the chemical imbalances that keep you from weight loss and optimum health. You will receive a complete eight week program.

Combining the program of corrective nutrition with meal plans based on the results of your tests, a weight loss of up to 4 pounds a week can be expected.

During the 8 week period the Doctors will re-conduct the LIFESCAN to show each individual's success.

It's Only Kindergarten

I imagine this: 185 kindergarten-age children gathered together in the same building with animals, insects and birds for four hours, five days a week.

Recipe for a nightmare?

Not hardly. In fact, the six teachers and six aides at Louisa Guasti School have turned those ingredients into an award-winning kindergarten-only school.

State Department of Education inspectors recently labelled the school's science, mathematics and reading programs "exemplary," according to Karen Neal, school principal.

Kindergarten-only is an unusual, though not unique, concept. Linda Vista School in the Ontario-Montclair School District is also all-kindergarten.

But unlike the Ontario school, Guasti houses all kindergarten-age children in the Cucamonga School District.

That arrangement has benefitted the children, Neal said.

"This is their first school experience, so we can teach them the rules of going to school," she said.

Better yet, since there are no older children roaming the halls to intimidate the youngsters, the kindergarteners "are the top dogs and they really feel good about it," she said.

That produces an environment conducive to learning, according to Neal.

"We've been focusing on science for the past year," Neal said, "but we also emphasize critical thinking and application.

"We go beyond the basic skills," she added, "so they can apply their education."

The children "do lots of writing" and are involved in scientific projects that include "the six process behaviors (of science): communicating, predicting, interpreting, classifying, observing and measuring," Neal said.

The hard work has yielded strong results.

"One-third of our children are reading at first-grade levels," Neal explained. "Another third are doing first-grade math."

Neal is no taskmaster, however.

"We don't skip all the good stuff you associate with kindergarten," she laughed.

Each student has the chance to be "child of the week," for instance.

"We don't require that they do anything special — just be themselves," Neal explained. "We have them bring in some things that are of interest to them, share their life history with the class.

"Then, at the end of the week," Neal continued, "the class makes up a book about the child.

"That way, everyone has a chance to feel special."

Teachers make special efforts as well.

On special holidays such as Cinco de Mayo (May 5, a Mexican holiday celebrating a victorious battle) and the Chinese New Year, Neal organizes "round robin days."

Each of the school's six rooms is decorated with a theme depicting a different facet of the holiday and the society celebrating it.

Children visit each room for about 20 minutes, "eating cookies ... and sampling the flavor of the culture," Neal said.

On one recent day, the children were sampling a piece of Americana. Puppeteer Becky Johnston, who teaches preschool in San Bernardino, entertained the students with a wide cast of hand-held characters.

Johnston's act had the children so enthralled they hardly noticed a large photographer perched under the podium.

More than 50 children squealed in delight as the puppets pulled pranks and took pratfalls.

When it was all over, the children stood and walked, mostly, out to lunch.

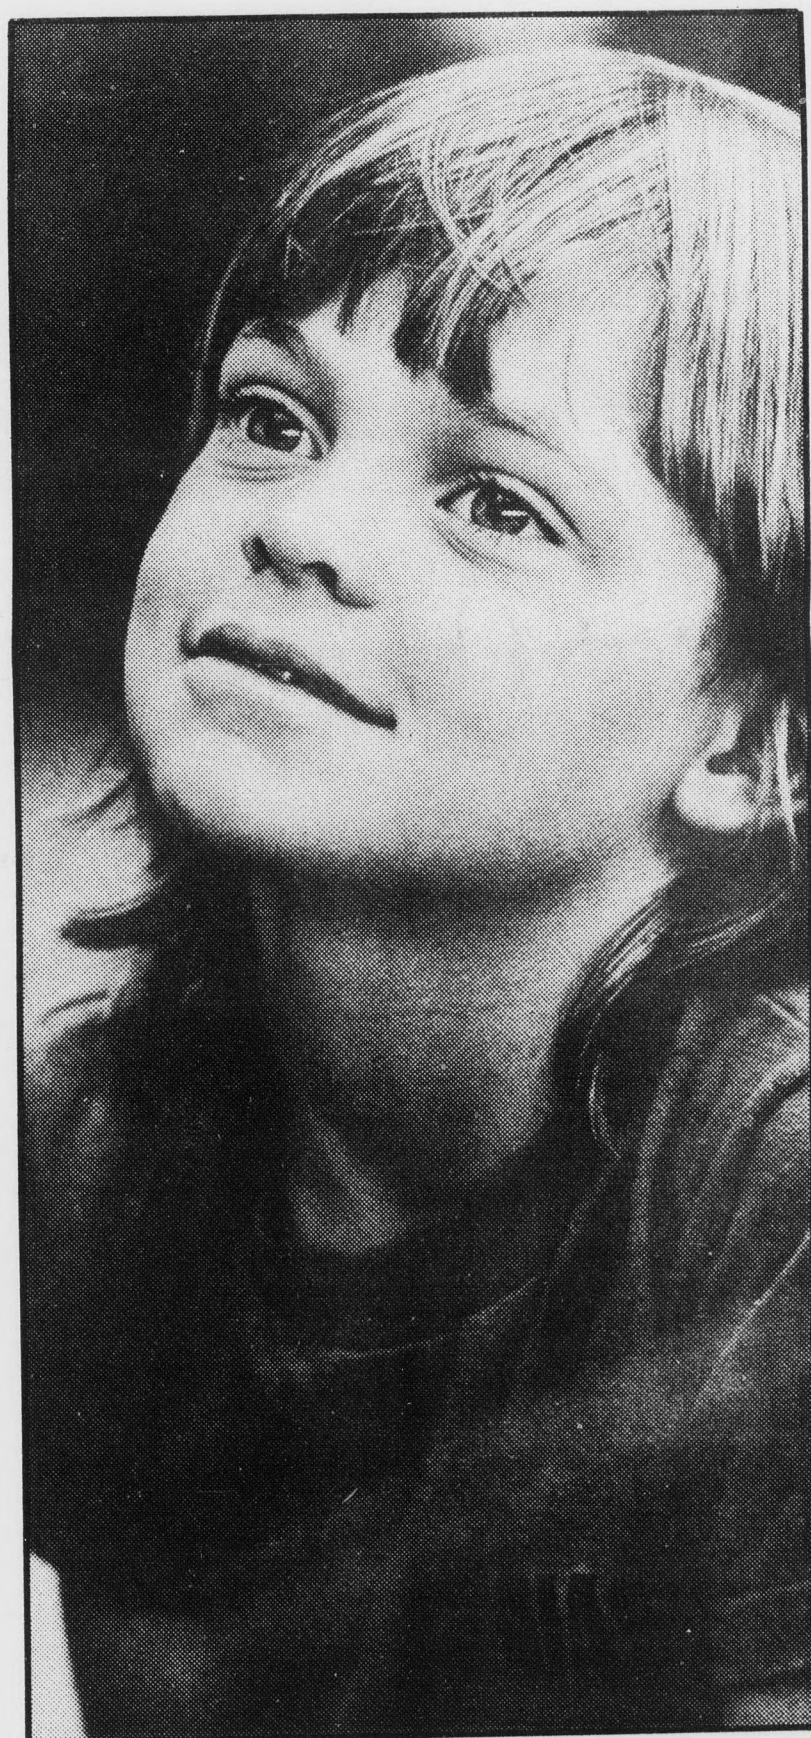

Johnston stood behind, smiling.

"You have such a responsibility," she said. "You don't want to disappoint all those faces." □

The children sit, enraptured, during a puppet show, (opposite page) the one of many special presentations at the school. Livy the troll, (top) was a favorite puppet. After enjoying the show, a thrilled six-year-old Alice Elder, right, joined her classmates outside for lunch, above.

Seamstress creates doll clothes for friends

By Suzanne Sproul

Agnes Loerience meticulously sews tiny seams and button holes for the pleasure of her friends.

The retired Loerience, who spent some of her working years as a seamstress in Fontana, now spends her free time sewing doll clothes.

The petite woman shyly says she enjoys her hobby, particularly when she hands a friend or acquaintance a doll dressed in one of her many miniature wardrobes. The dolls are symbols of her affection.

"I have the time. It is my hobby. I need to do some work," she says in a soft, Hungarian accent.

Loerience came to the West Valley 20 years ago from Budapest, Hungary. She moved from Fontana to Ontario in 1974.

Many of her dresses are original designs, while others are copied from a magazine photo.

Her favorite designs are from her native Hungary where the dolls wear the familiar white, red and green dresses and headwear. The rest of the dresses she makes are patterned after the Victorian era.

"I don't work with patterns. I do them from scratch," she says.

Each of the dresses display a careful consideration of detail.

No detail is too small, even the small beaded designs found on one doll's shoes.

All of her dolls are dressed in lace petticoats or slips, dresses, shoes and hats.

One of the many dolls sitting in Loerience's study is a Nancy Reagan doll.

Scots eye key BL track victory

Upland High School faced the last stiff hurdle en route to a Baseline League track dual meet championship this afternoon at Pomona.

The Scots turned back rival Alta Loma in both boys and girls' action last week to set the stage for the meet with Pomona, which lost a controversial boys' decision to the Braves earlier this season.

Double winner Cliff Gill tied his own Upland record in the 330 intermediate hurdles (40.41) and set a new personal best in 120 high hurdles (15.34). Gill credited his training for the record performance.

"Until recently I've been relying strictly on speed," said Gill of 120-yard race. "But lately I've been getting my steps down and today was probably the best my steps have been so far."

Of the winning Upland program Gill said, "Upland has several excellent specialty coaches, we (the athletes) don't have to rely on one coach to do everything."

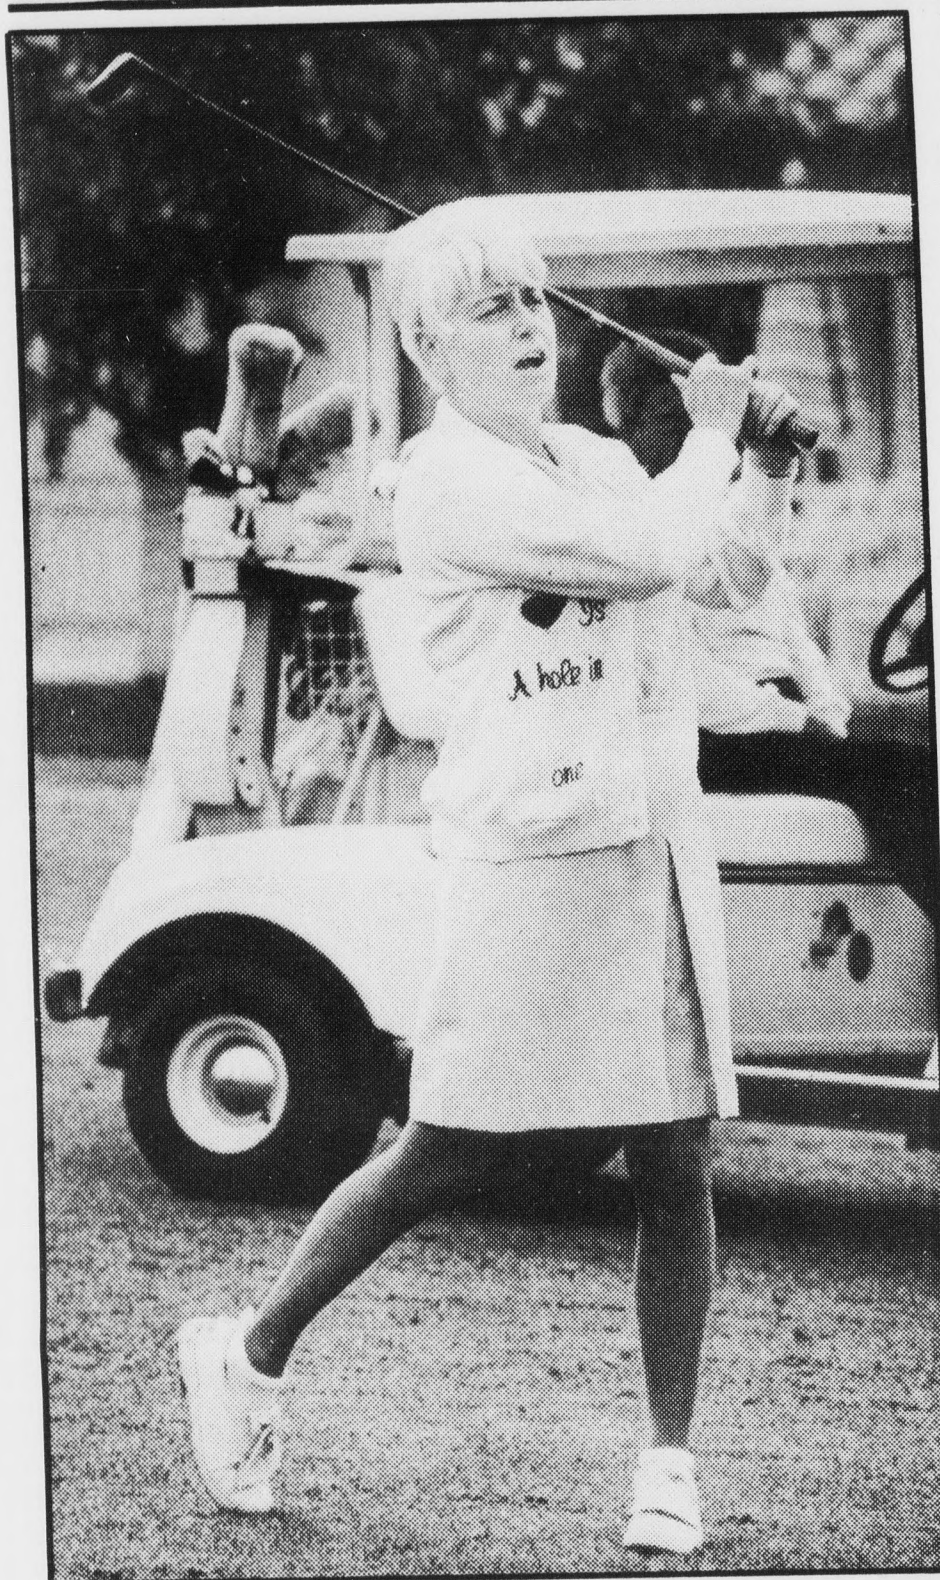

Todd Knight also tied a school mark with a 6-foot-6 winning effort in the high jump. He also won the long jump.

Other double winners included Bill Hestletine in the mile (4:43.35) and two-mile (10:02.74); sprinter Audley Walker took the 100 (10.87) and 200 (22.47), winning the latter race by a nine-yard margin.

Upland ran away with the girls' victory thanks to outstanding efforts by Lakeishia Morris, Glenda Smith and Heather Watson.

Morris, a freshman sprinter, won the 100 (12.75) and 200 (22.47), while Smith completed a taxing double in winning the 800 (2:22.46) and 400 (59.63).

Eric Vilchis

Elsie Odell of Ontario watches her approach shot to the third green fall short in the women's club championship tournament at Upland Hills Country Club. Play continues through next week.

UHCC women's action

Cheryl Wilkinson has a one-stroke lead over Robin Perdamo after the opening round of the Upland Hills Country Club women's club championship.

The second round of the three-week event is scheduled was today.

Wilkinson posted an 82 over the par-70 course to grab the slim lead in the championship flight. The low gross score after three rounds will determine the champion.

Other flight leaders include: Joyce Hall in the second flight with an 88, ahead of Faye Frazier's 95; Chris Long with a 91 in the third flight, with JoAnn Sterba second at 95; Joan Clark the fourth flight leader at 105, three shots ahead of Dee Higby.

take somebody who know's he's got to go and it's all over, and you're riding to jail and he says, 'I can't believe this happened to me.'

"He's sitting there, he's not bleeding, he's not been severely thumped, but he can't believe it. They don't really feel like they're crooks. They feel like they're victims or something.

"It's always somebody else's fault," Holmes said in disgust.

Holmes often mixes pleasure with business; family with work. His wife, Brenda, is one of "the team" whom Holmes employs on more dangerous missions.

"She was always asking me what I did out there, so one day I took her along," Holmes said.

"She's meaner than hell," he added with admiration.

Brenda, informed of the accolade, scoffed a modest denial.

"Out there," Holmes said, nodding to the street, "she is my partner."

It has been a successful working relationship. After spending 10 years in the L.A. County Sheriff's Department, Holmes retired with a work-related injury. That was almost nine years ago.

"It took me a year to get my first job," Holmes said. "I was very persistent at about 20 different (bail bond) companies. Finally I got a 'skip' (bail jumper) that no one else could find ... and found her in Atlanta in a bar on the phone."

These days, "I have to turn cases away."

A successful bail bondsman will earn "about 20 percent of the bail" on an average case, he said. "But there are lots of reasons you might charge more."

Fabric gives potted plants some pizzazz

By Kelle Banks Barfield
Copley News Service

Nothing adds more freshness and life to your home than a bright, healthy potted plant. But these days, nursery prices for flowering plants and ferns can be somewhat inhibitive, preventing you from buying as many as you'd really like to have on hand.

One colorful way to cut down on the cost of indoor greenery is to decorate the inexpensive plastic planter with scraps of festive fabric.

Although it is possible to work on the plastic pot with the plant still inside, you may find it easier to carefully lift the plant and dirt out of the pot before watering it and rest them in a sink until the fabric decoupage is in place.

First, thoroughly clean the sides, bottom and inner rim of the plastic. Then begin to glue fabric pieces around the planter, using a few large pieces or many small ones. Plan ahead by applying a sturdy glue that will resist moisture from humidity and condensation after watering.

As you tuck and glue fabric around the bottom edge of the pot, remember to leave the drainage holes on the bottom uncovered. Fabric around the top of the planter will need to be turned inside about 1 inch, so it will be below the dirt level, even after watering.

In addition to fabric, other decorative notions like braids, ribbons and lace can add a distinctive look to your inexpensive planter. You can even include buttons in the design scheme by sewing them on fabric pieces before gluing the fabric to the pot.

One particularly unique touch is to include a fabric ruffle as an accent piece around the edge of the planter. For a 1-inch-wide ruffle, cut a 3-inch strip of fabric, long enough to go around the circumference of the pot. The correct length will be the circumference multiplied by two, since the fabric will be folded back to create the ruffle. If you don't have enough length to accomplish this, cut two or more lengths and sew them together before folding.

Make the ruffle by first folding back 1 inch along the length of the fabric, then folding back a second time and thoroughly gluing it in place. This hides the raw edges completely and makes the ruffle sturdy enough to stand out without drooping. You should be left with another inch of fabric with which to attach the ruffle to the inside of the pot.

Now create the ruffle by folding the fabric widthwise, beginning about 2 inches from the end. Press the fold in place with a hot iron.
